

Mrs. I. H. Teel, of Visalia, Cal., who has been visiting friends here for some days, left on her homeward journey Tuesday. She will stop at St. Louis and Colorado points to visit friends enroute. Mrs. Teel is in excellent health and very much enjoys living in California. Mr. Teel is remembered most pleasantly by the people of Earlington from the time of his pastorate of the Christian church here some years ago. He still owns Earlington real estate which he bought and built upon when he lived here.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Revival Meeting.

A protracted meeting will begin at the Christian church at Earlinton on Sunday night, Oct. 10th. Preaching by Evangelist S. R. Maxwell, of St. Louis. The meetings will continue nightly for at least two weeks.

Mr. Maxwell is an able speaker as well as an author of note. His book on Psychology is rated as a standard work, fully covering that deep subject.

While Mr. Maxwell is a profound thinker, he is not one of the class of erudite men who carry an audience into a maze of speculation and leave it to flounder.

He has the rare gift of trilling the Gospel Plan so one feels satisfied there is a plan and the way is plain.

Magnetic in personality, gifted in oratory, he will undoubtedly preach to large audiences in Earlinton and do a good work.

Following is a list of subjects for the first week:

Sunday—The Man from Mars.

—Chart Sermon.

Monday—The Greatest Force in the World.

Tuesday—A Question in Arithmetic.

Wednesday—Something Better than the Flag.

Thursday—Crucifying Christ While we Wear His Robes.

Friday—The Prisoner at the Bar.

Saturday—The Eternal Companion.

OFFERS $50,000 AS A MARRIAGE FEE

ASSERTS COUNT WHO MARRIED WEALTHY WIDOW WOULD SETTLE OUT OF COURT.

LOVE LETTERS ARE IN FRENCH

Doctor's Wife Wrote Missives for Count Eulalia and Mrs. Stetson Had to Have Them Translated. —Sues for $10,000.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Dr. Franklin Ernst says negotiations are in progress here for a settlement out of court of the $10,000 matrimonial fee claimed by his wife for her services in arranging the marriage of Count Santa Eulalia and the widow of John B. Stetson, the multimillionaire hat-maker.

It is said a cash offer in excess of $5000 has been made, but Dr. and Mrs. Ernst are reticent on this point.

"No matter how this case comes out," said Dr. Ernst Thursday "Count Eulalia has to answer to my face for a letter he wrote me, saying my wife and I were trying to blackmail him. He shall answer to me personally for that insult."

Lawyer Calls to Settle Case.

The preliminary overtures for a settlement were made Wednesday night at the boarding house of the Ernsts, 329 Michigan avenue, by a lawyer named Warren, who, Dr. Ernst said, declared he had been communicated with by long distance telephone from Philadelphia by lawyers for the Stetson estate, who inquired about the possibilities of a cash settlement of the proposed suit.

"Were those letters written to Mrs. Stetson by my wife for the count passionate and loving? Well, I should say they were," said Dr. Ernst. "All of Mrs. Stetson's letters from the count were written in French by my wife. Noff, French is the court language of all Europe, and a nobleman who can't write French is not much of a nobleman."

"The count can speak French because he lived or existed for a time in Paris, but he can't write it. I don't believe Mrs. Stetson can read French, so you can see that quite a number of people must have been close to this wooing."

"Mrs. Stetson probably had to have her love letters translated. The letters were not written in English, because Mrs. Stetson knew that the count could not write English."

Letters Will Make Good Reading.

"Can a copy of these letters be had?" was inquired.

Mrs. Ernst appeared at this point and was just in time to hear the question.

"None of the letters will be made public at this time," she chimed in. "They will make a good reading and probably they will be read in court," said Dr. Ernst. "It makes my blood boil," he continued, "to think of the way that scoundrel has treated me and my wife."

TWO AUTOISTS ARE KILLED

Meet Death Bringing Back Leo Stevens' Balloon When Machine Was Wrecked.

New York, Sept. 30.—Edward Baker, proprietor of the Mineola (L. I.) garage, and Parker Norton, owner of the Mineola Press, were killed in the wreck of an automobile in which they were bringing Leo Stevens' balloon back to Krugs Corner from Hicksville. William Watson, who was driving the car, escaped with slight injuries. Watson had volunteered to follow the balloon, which ascended from along the Hudson river late in the afternoon, and bring it back after the landing. He reached Hicksville, where the balloon landed, and was followed shortly by A. R. Perdigon in a second car.

Pardington took Stevens and Dr. Lucas, the aeronauts, in his machine back to Krugs hotel, leaving Watson and the other two men to follow with the balloon. When the party failed to arrive Pardington returned to search for them and found the machine wrecked against a telegraph pole on the Jericho turnpike. Near it lay the body of Baker with a broken neck and Norton with a fractured skull.

BANK ROBBERS MAKE HAUL

Three Heavily Armed Unmasked Men Hold Up Glenwood Springs, Col. Cashier in Daytime.

Glenwood Springs, Colo., Oct. 1.—The Citizens' National Bank of Glenwood Springs was held up and robbed of $10,000 in cash by three unmasked, but heavily armed men. The robbers escaped to the valley westward, 30 minutes ahead of a sheriff's posse.

The robbers rode up to the rear of the bank, leisurely dismounted and tied their horses. Being unmasked, they aroused no suspicion.

They then went to the front entrance and two entered and held up Assistant Cashier E. E. Drach, who was behind the cashier's window. One of the bandits cocked a revolver and told him to "hurry or be shot." Drach gave the men all the money in sight.

REDISTRICTING BOARD NAMED

Men Appointed to Serve as Commission to Redistrict

LEGISLATIVE AND SENATORIAL DISTRICTS OF THE STATE.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 5.—Gov. Willson wrote letters to Judge Alex Humphreys and Andrew Cowan, Louisville; O. H. Waddle, Somerset; T. L. Edelen, Frankfort; John R. Allen, Lexington; John F. Hager, Ashland; L. J. Crawford, Newport; John T. Shelby, Lexington; Jere Sullivan, Richmond; C. U. McElroy, Bowling Green, asking them to serve as a commission to prepare a legislative and senatorial redistricting bill to be presented to the next legislature. He informs them that there is no provision for pay or expenses, but that he will ask the legislature to make an allowance. The commission is bi-partisan. The letter follows:

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 5.—Gov. Willson has chosen a commission to redistrict Kentucky. He writes as follows:

"To Judge Alex P. Humphrey, Chairman, Louisville; Col. Andrew Cowan, Louisville; Mr. O. H. Waddle, Somerset, Ky.; Mr. T. L. Edelen, Frankfort, Ky.; Col. John R. Allen, Lexington, Ky.; Mr. John F. Hager, Ashland, Ky.; Hon. L. J. Crawford, Newport, Ky.; Mr. John T. Shelby, Lexington, Ky.; Hon. Jere Sullivan, Richmond, Ky.; Hon. C. U. McElroy, Bowling Green, Ky.:

"Gentlemen: Section 33 of the Constitution, which is the covenant of the people of Kentucky, binding upon all the people and their officers, commands that once in every ten years the State shall be divided into thirty-eight Senatorial districts and one hundred Representative districts, provided, in doing so, the principle requiring every district be as nearly equal in population as may be shall not be violated. The law now in force in the act of 1893, more than sixteen years ago.

Three years after the time commanded by the constitution the act of 1906 was adopted, redistricting the State, but in Ragland vs. Anderson, 125 Kentucky, the Court of Appeals, in an eminently non-partisan opinion, held that the inequality of this act is so glaring that it precludes the possibility that there was any attempt to divide the State into 100 legislative districts as nearly equal as may be, and that it was clearly violative of the constitutional inhibition against equality, and declared the equality of representation is a vital principle of Democracy; that without equality republican institutions are impossible, and that inequality of representation is a tyranny to which no people worthy of freedom will tamely submit; that equality of representation is the basis of patriotism; that no citizen will, or ought to, love the State which oppresses him, and that citizen is arbitrarily oppressed who is denied equality of representation with every other citizen of the Commonwealth.

"It is known to all the people, and was implied by the opinion of the Court of Appeals, that the existing law, the act of 1893, also clearly violates the constitution, but that it could not be held it was unconstitutional without throwing the state government into chaos, as it has been organized under the law after the adoption of the new constitution.

"The court expressed its faith that the members of the next General Assembly, impelled by their sense of duty, the obligations of their oath of office, together with the spirit of justice, which is the heritage of the race, will redistrict the State as the Constitution requires."

"It is clearly to be regretted by all that the last General Assembly did not redistrict the State, and that another election of Senators and Representatives must be held under the unequal and unfair act of 1893.

"The 'sense of duty,' the 'obligations of the oath of office' and 'the spirit of justice which is the heritage of the race' will again impose upon the next General Assembly this duty of redistricting the State as the constitution requires.

"But the short term of sixty days and the many important matters which will be considered in that assembly, will endanger the chance of adopting a just re-districting bill, and in order to lessen the preliminary work I feel it my duty to the State to ask a bi-partisan commission of upright citizens to canvass the population, under the last census, and report to the Governor, for his recommendation to the General Assembly, a just and equal re-districting bill.

"For the good of the State, I invite you gentlemen, well-known citizens, equally divided in political affiliation, to take the Constitution, the geography and the census and prepare a measure to re-district the State, which will give a square deal to all the people of the State without regard to section or party.

"I feel sure that I can recommend to the General Assembly any plan which such men as you, or a majority, shall report to be fair and just. There is no provision of law to pay the expenses.

"The report will in no way bind the General Assembly, except in so far as its wisdom and fairness shall affect the opinions and consciences of the members.

"But I shall be glad to ask the General Assembly, if it approves the result of your labors, to pay the actual necessary expenses incurred by you in making the preliminary investigation. The sting of inequality and injustice in the present districts hurts the feelings of all good people. While perfect equality of population in all districts is not possible, it seems to be wholly a question of mathematics and geography to make all districts as nearly equal as may be. And I believe that if you make the calculations and report a just plan you will have a reward which men of your character value more than money in the respect and honor which such work will win from all the people.

"Judge Humphrey will act as chairman to confer with the other members and fix the date and place of your first meeting, after which the commission will do the work in its own way. You are also requested to consider what, if any, changes, in our present election laws are needed to protect the people in honest, just and fair elections. And, if time permits, to report whether the judicial district, appellate and circuit, the Congressional and Railroad Commission districts, are justly and fairly constituted, and if not, what changes are necessary to make them just and fair.

"It is my prayer and hope that your deliberations will result in plans which will put an end to all hard feelings over unequal and unfair representation, and will have a part in deserving and winning the respect of people and our institutions.

Yours truly,

"AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON, Governor of Kentucky."

Locomotive Blasts.

May Enjoin Merger.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 25.—Attorney General Breathitt will file suit to prevent the merger of the Louisville and Atlantic if he decides that the purchase of the latter road is illegal. A protest against the merger or the purchase of the Louisville and Atlantic by the Louisville and Nashville is being made by the citizens of Richmond on the grounds that the lines are competing and the deal cannot be legally consummated under the State statutes. Attorney General Breathitt was asked to investigate the case by Governor Willson, and he stated today that the filing of the suit would be his answer if he thought the deal illegal.

Water Tank at Morganfield.

The L. & N. R. R. Co., is building a large water tank near the station on Main street. Morganfield will be a terminal of the new line to Louisville and it is expected that trains will be running in two months.

Hence the tank will be erected for permanent use and will draw water from the Thomas Coal Mines.—Morganfield Sun.

Clay Depot Robbed.

Tuesday night some unknown thief obtained entrance to the L. & N. depot by entering the colored waiting room, breaking out the screen in the ticket window at Clay. The cash drawer was torn to pieces and about $1.75 in pennies was taken.—Webster County Times.

Jame H. Cole, 53 years old, Third avenue, died at 12 o'clock Sunday morning. Cole has been bookkeeper at the L. & N. railroad at the Hotel shops for the last few years. His death was caused by asthma with which he has been severely ill for the last month. Mr. Cole leaves a son, Richard, of Mount Carmel, Ill.

President C. H. Bowen, of the Winchester Commercial Club, writes that an inspection of route has been made for a proposed traction line from Winchester to Sharpsburg, but as yet there is no organization or company formed.

Metcalf and Hart counties are reported to offer $300,000 for the building of an electric railway from Horse Cave to Edmont.

W. H. West is on the interurban during conductor Leahy's absence.

Deception of the Circus.

A writer in Collier's who is as familiar with circus life as a press agent, but who doesn't respect trade secrets, says that the graceful young lady bareback rider, and the shapely creature who does thrillers on the flying trapeze, are frequently young men, made feminine in appearance by the addition of a blonde wig and excelsior where nature failed to qualify him for the role.

Making the Best of Life.

Comparatively few men know how to live. The man who has no system in his life, who is regulated by no definite principle and proposes to himself no great and honorable end is not likely to show a satisfactory result. Reflect on the vast possibilities of your life—of honor, usefulness and happiness. Is your life as intelligent as happy, as useful as you might have made it?

A Chump.

"He is an awful chump, isn't he?" "Yes, he bought a ticket in an automobile raffle and then built a garage for the drawing came off." "What do you know about that?" "He disappointed when the drawing came off." "Not so you could not it; he won the auto."—Houston Post.

Ominous Outlook for Leaf Tobacco.

Conditions are arising in the tobacco situation which are giving grave concern to observers and growers. There are many indications to those new conditions which render an instructive analysis of the situation extremely difficult. The situation is unstable, formative and shifting; consequently conclusions predicated upon such complex data are necessarily more or less speculative. But one thing is certain, and that is that tobacco growers are confronted with new problems that require accurate information and cool judgment in their solution.

The department of commerce and labor of the United States government publishes a daily bulletin entitled "Daily Commerce and Trade Reports." In Bulletin 3331 Consul R. M. Arleman, of Madrid, in referring to the monopoly controlling the leaf trade of Spain, uses in part the following language:

"The monopoly some two years ago began to purchase Brazilian tobacco at Hamburg and Bremen, in order to replace, little by little, the American product which it formerly purchased in the United States and in other markets. It is now said that the monopoly is thinking of forming, in conjunction with other tobacco purchasing countries, a trust to lower the price of his product in other markets."

In Bulletin 3311 Deputy Consul General John W. Dye, of Dayton, under the caption, "American Tobacco in the German market," uses the following language:

"For the past five years American leaf tobacco has largely been replaced by tobacco from Java and Sumatra and to a less extent by tobacco from Santo Domingo. The cigar manufacturers claim that they are not dependent on American leaf tobacco, as Dutch East Indian tobacco now fills all requirements. The falling off in imports of American tobacco into Germany in the past few years is attributed to the relatively high price of the American product compared with tobacco from other countries."

"The prediction is made by all those consulted that in case the prices of American tobacco were raised the imports would decrease accordingly."

Mr. Dye also stated that imports of leaf from the United States have fallen off 1,400 tons since 1903. In this connection it may also be stated that recently Germany has heavily increased her import duty on leaf tobacco, which will doubtless further decrease her imports from the United States.

In Bulletin 3287 Vice Consul Bayard Cutting, Jr., of Milan, Italy, under the heading "Seeking Independence of Foreign Tobacco," states, among other things, as follows:

"It has long been felt that Italy should be freed from its dependence on the foreign and especially American tobacco. Kentucky tobacco dominates the Italian tobacco situation. It produces three-fifths of the entire material, and it is indispensable for the manufacture of the popular brands of cigars. In 1904-5 the prices of Kentucky remained low, and even fell from year to year. But since that time they have been rising by giant strides. A widespread alarm has been awakened in Italy, and the government has pressed more energetically the measures which they had already prepared in earlier years.

"To make Italy more or less independent of the American supply may be said to be the main object of the Italian policy at present. The measures which can be taken to this end are of three kinds: First—As a production, the government can encourage the cultivation of tobacco of the American type. Second—As purchaser it can import tobaccos capable of substitution for the American. Third—As manufacturer it can alter the proportion of home and foreign tobaccos in the various cigars, cigarettes, etc., and gradually wean the public taste from all American brands.

"The government is doing its best to educate the farmer and to remove part of the risk and expense from his shoulders."

Under the heading, "Continuance of Purchase of American Leaf," Vice Consul Cutting says:

"As long as the American product, while remaining superior to the Italian, is obtainable at prices low enough to discourage the Italian planter, so long as it is sure to hold its own in spite of all the efforts of the government and of private enterprise."

"But a sudden and violent rise in American prices, coming after the excitement and apprehension caused in Italy by the recent troubles in Kentucky (feelings fostered by the efforts of the press), might act like a chemical spark and produce a reaction which a little caution would avoid. It is obvious that if Kentucky tobacco is once grown successfully on a large scale all over Italy its cultivation will continue, even though the high American prices which originally induced it should not longer exist."

Since the above consular report was written trade reports have been published to the effect that Italy is purchasing largely of tobacco raised in Brazil and elsewhere, and has laid about three years' supply of such tobacco.

In connection with these Italian trade reports, it is of interest to note that it is officially reported that Brazil expected during the first four months of the current year about $4,000,000 worth more of leaf than she exported during the corresponding four months of the year 1908. This is highly significant, to say the least.

In Bulletin 3400 Consul General Robert J. Wynn, of London, in discussing the British leaf tobacco trade, states as follows:

"The American leaf tobacco trade in the United Kingdom could not hold the modest position it held in 1907. Its decline is due chiefly to the disturbed conditions of affairs in Kentucky and Tennessee."

On top of these consular warnings comes the recent government showing, already widely published, to the effect that during the fiscal year ending June 30, last, the United States exported nearly forty-three million pounds less of leaf tobacco than during the previous fiscal year. When it is remembered that there was also a falling off shown for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, the significance of these progressive, heavy declines in export of leaf is disturbing.

In this connection it is opportune to state that our exports of Burley to France have practically ceased, because of prohibitive prices, other grades having been substituted, and it is doubtful if this trade can ever be recovered under any circumstances of price conditions. The same is in a measure true of some other countries to which we have heretofore exported Burley tobacco in more or less liberal quantities.

It is also a well-known fact that our shipments of leaf to Japan are less than one-third of what they formerly were.

From the foregoing it is readily apparent that a great impetus has been given to the growing of tobacco in countries, hitherto producing but little. It is also very evident that these foreign-grown tobaccos are being largely substituted for leaf formerly raised in the United States.

The reasons for the state of affairs are frankly stated, in the consular reports previously quoted, as prohibitive prices and unsettled conditions.

In this connection it is also pertinent to state that the world produces annually about 3,000,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco, of which the United States produces less than one-third. Therefore, the assumption on the part of our leaf producers that they have the only land in the world that can grow the kind of tobacco that the world wants is fallacious. Foreign buyers clearly indicate a determination to bring American growers to a realizing sense of this fallacy by obtaining their leaf supplies elsewhere.

In short, foreign countries, in view of our civic conditions in some of our principal tobacco-growing sections, have entered vigorously into the occupation of tobacco growing in their respective countries and their several colonies and dependencies.

Turning from the foreign to the domestic field, not only is the old Burley territory producing a large crop, but because of high prices and the migration of Burley territory in Kentucky, this type of tobacco is now being successfully raised in material quantities in Missouri, and in an experimental way in Illinois, as well as in some other states hitherto not engaged in Burley production. The reports of the success of Burley growers in Missouri are especially cheerful, indicating gratifying success and a disposition to expand the industry. With this increased production and minimized consumption, both foreign and domestic, what is to be the result?

Our home manufacturers can consume only so much, and if in consequence of the aforementioned causes a large surplus accumulates for which there is no demand, will the grower recognize the legitimate causes for his embarrassment, or will he blame imaginary persecutors and seek artificial means for remedying real evils brought about largely by his own indiscretions and blindness to the operation of the laws of causes and effect and supply and demand?

In this connection it may be properly remarked that the breaks are a better market on which to sell tobacco than political meetings. The marts of trade are better places to find customers than legislative halls. Cash buyers at fair prices are as a rule, better customers than pooling combinations, which themselves in the last analysis are subject to the law of supply and demand, and the outcome of which is, therefore, problematical, while at the same time involving expense, inconvenience and delay, and the withholding from circulation the money that the cash buyer would provide for the facilitation of trade in all of its arteries.

These facts and observations suggest future contingencies unpleasant to contemplate.

It is both weak and fatal for tobacco growers to close their eyes to impending danger. The sensible thing to do is to anticipate possible disaster by forestalling its occurrences through preventive measure.

It is by no means these object of the utterances to discourage the growth of tobacco. Such a course would entail economic readjustments little less disastrous in their operation and consequences than the loss of our export leaf trade.

The world is accustomed to our leaf, and likes it. Our leaf has the prestige of use through centuries in the world's markets. Moreover, tobacco is, so to speak, our historic prop. America gave it to mankind and mankind associates the "soothing weed" with American institutions in history, in statecraft, in song and in sentiment. The very sentiment of this association firmly fixed in the minds of the world's tobacco users is a priceless asset. Therefore, instead of producing less, we should raise more; instead of alienating our foreign customers we should and can enlarge their numbers and increase their patronage. This can easily be done by substituting rational for hysterical business methods. The world is willing and anxious to pay a fair price for our leaf, but will not pay an exorbitant price, nor will it submit to indignities and barbaric civic conditions in order to obtain it.

Our home manufacturers can consume only enough to supply the enormous consumptive requirements that their brains and enterprise have built up, and no amount of attempted coercion can compel them to buy more. Home manufacturers are powerless to compel the consuming public to buy their product, made of leaf at prohibitive prices, or to consume more than suits the inclination of the public.

Kentucky's corn crop is officially estimated at 113,000,000 bushels which places this state at the head of states east of the Mississippi. Last year's yield was but 85,000,000 bushels and the highest yield ever was that of 1906, when 105,000,000 bushels were grown. This year's Kentucky crop at current farm prices is estimated at $55,000,000.

Headline writers will have to amend their phrases to meet the world's progress. For instance "Ends Flying Trip Abroad" will not do, in these advanced days of aeronautics, to apply to the return of a sedate educator, the head of a great university.

"Dear Lord," is the favorite prayer of an Atchison spinster, "make me to see every time I come to thee with complaints what my married brothers and sisters have to put up with from their children, that I may cease my complaining, and be duly grateful that thou hast seen fit in thy wisdom to make a carefree spinster of me."—Atchison (Kan.) Cheeriness is a thing to be more profoundly grateful for than all that genius ever inspired or talent ever accomplished. Next best to natural, spontaneous cheeriness is deliberate, intended and persistent cheeriness, which we can create, can cultivate and can so foster and cherish that after a few years the world will never suspect that it was not an hereditary gift.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

LEBI IS A GREAT MAN

to Sultan, This Monk is Most Powerful Individual in Ottoman Empire.

Constantinople.—Next to the sultan, the tchelebi of Koniah, who was summoned sooner than was planned to ride the sword of Osman upon Mohammed V., is the greatest personage in the Ottoman empire, for he is the most descendant of Ala Eddin, sultan of the Seljuks, who gave up his title as the founder of the present dynasty, and the illustrious, so as to be able to lead a retired life. This happened in the fourteenth century, and Tchelebi of Koniah.

Ever since then the descendants of Ala Eddin have invested the sultan by riding him with Osman's sword. The tchelebi and his followers, who are rich in land and live in a monastery at Koniah in Asia Minor, are known to the European world as dancing dervishes.

Each dervish, on entering Tchelebi's monastery, has to take a vow of chastity, poverty and obedience, his calling answering to that of the monk of western ideas. All the same, they are allowed to marry and have a house in the town, though they must pass at least two nights a week in their monastery. Neither do they keep strictly to the vow of poverty, for besides a trade, many get large sums as presents from the faithful. Humility of soul they profess; but no man has a prouder manner and exterior than a dervish.

Amongst the more educated Turks, they have lost much of their ancient prestige and they have come down to mere conjurers. But the people fear and love them, and did tchelebi of Koniah refuse to give up Osman's sword, or did the sultan abolish the other way, millions of the faithful would refuse to acknowledge Mohammed as their savior.

Just as he is in the Ottoman empire, his last six of these monasteries, which the Turks call Mevlivi, from the name of their founder—Mevlevahina-Djelaladdin-el-Rumi. They have a tekke or convent at Pera, Constantinople; and a room at Scutari where they perform their exercises.

IS PRODIGY WITH FIGURES.

Harborside, Mich.—In this village lives Thomas Carmel O'Neill, perhaps the most wonderful mathematical prodigy in the world. Answers to the most intricate problems appear to him instantaneously, as in a photograph.

The discovery of his wonderful gift came to Mr. O'Neill in 1879, when he was a boy of 12 attending a country school. Problems in mental arithmetic were solved by him without effort and he quickly multiplied two rows of 50 figures each.

Mr. O'Neill can reduce years and months to seconds, miles to rods, feet to inches, etc., with lightning-like rapidity. He can take the number 32, square it, square the products 32 successive times, and the correct answer is photographed before his eyes with one instantaneous thought, quicker than the clock ticks once. Not only can he do this with the number 32, but with any number, large or small.

He can take 25 numbers of 500 figures each, multiply the first by the second and each successive product against each and every one to the termination of the last row, making a number of more than 10,000 figures, performing each multiplication instantaneously.

He will take 53 rolls of paper, each 100 feet long, containing numbers, 45 figures wide and embodying 255,440 numbers, making a total of 20 feet over a mile. He will add the first roll, retain the result, unite it with the second, and so on, 53 successive times, almost instantly.

HAD THE AUDIENCE WITH HIM

Christian Missionary Had Little Show in Argument with Native Mollah.

As a medical missionary, stationed for 13 years in northwestern India, near the Afghanistan frontier, Dr. T. L. Pennell had his share of peril and adventure, which he has recounted in a volume entitled, "Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Border."

As a medical man, Dr. Pennell had his ups and downs with the native doctors, who sweat their patients and burn sores with lighted oil, but have no faith in western treatment. They also bleed and purge; but gradually the new-fangled treatment was accepted, and grateful converts were made at the Bannu dispensary.

As a missionary, Dr. Pennell had to contend with the mollahs, who are argumentative and great browbeaters; and very often, he confesses, he got the worst of it by verdict of the ragged crowd that hemmed in the theologians.

With a certain mollah, who regarded the Christian medicine-man as a rival, Dr. Pennell had an amusing encounter.

"Do you know," asked the mollah, "what becomes of the sun when it sets every day?"

The doctor gave the native circle the scientific explanation.

"Rubbish!" exclaimed the mollah. "We all know that the fires of hell are under the earth, and that the sun passes down every night, and therefore comes up blazing hot in the morning."

All Dr. Pennell's accounts of natural phenomena were ridiculed by the mollah. Then, turning to his people, he said, with contempt in his face and voice:

"It is evident that I shall have to teach him everything from the beginning."—Youth's Companion.

ORIGIN OF BRITISH SQUARE

Battle Formation First Used by Scotch Troops at the Battle of Bannockburn.

The greatest of all Scotch anniversaries is that of Bannockburn, fought on midsummer day in the year 1314. Apart from its bearing on the independence of Scotland, the battle will always have an exceptional interest from the military point of view, as Bannockburn may be said to have been the birthplace of the British square. "Proud Edward's" army mainly consisted of cavalry, while that of the Scots, on the other hand, was almost exclusively composed of foot-folk, armed with the spear, and these Bruce threw into "schiltroms," or oblong squares—a formation borrowed by Wallace from the Flemings, who had employed it with success at Courtray—to resist the charge of the English cavalry.

Hitherto the mounted mail-clad knight had carried everything before him, but Courtray and Bannockburn proved that he was powerless to break resolute, spear-armed infantry drawn up in "schiltroms" or oblong squares, and these two battles revolved the tactics of the continent.

and of our own island. Profiting by the lesson which had been taught them at Bannockburn the English applied the tactics of the Scots with brilliant success at Crecy, and still more at Agincourt. As it was the Scots who may be said to have originated the British square at Bannockburn, so it was they again who at Balacava were the first to discard it with "their thin red line," and now, owing to our changed conditions of warfare, it is discarded altogether.

Duel with a Tiger.

Three Jakuns (aborigines) and a Malay chanced to be together in the jungle in Johore when they came across a tiger. They were only armed with parangs, and the Malay, wisely deciding in favor of discretion, took to his heels. Not so the Jakuns, however; for they at once determined to give battle, not utilizing their numerical superiority, but in the most sportsman manner arranging for the combat in a series of duels, if necessary.

As might have been expected, the series was necessary, and the end was not long in coming. The first man who entered the fray missed his blow and was at once struck down, and the same fate befell his two comrades, all three being killed.—Singapore Free Press.

For Parents Only.

Parents nowadays have good cause to grumble. When they were young, father and mother were paramount. Now that they are old, pa and ma don't count a straw.

"After all," exclaimed the young lady visitor to the paterfamilias, who had supplied her plate with all the choicest titbits from the roast fowl, "there is nothing in the world like the breast of a chicken, is there?"

"I can't say," replied paterfamilias enviously. "I have never tasted the white meat in my life. When I was young my parents ate it; now my children do."

Soldier's Odd Weapon.

A soldier named Paviet was condemned to death by court-martial at Oran, France, the other day. He was charged with assaulting a corporal whilst on duty. During the hearing he threw at the president of the council a curious weapon made by himself, the blade of a pair of scissors fastened into a wooden handle. He was at once tried for this crime, and the death sentence pronounced.

SOCIAL CLIMBERS IN NEVADA

Land of Gold Witnesses Many Strange Vicissitudes in the Matter of Wealth.

To-day a humble gold-seeker may be living in a hutch of the simple architecture of a box car, says Good Housekeeping. Tomorrow he is building a "villa" with real clapboards and shingles, hiring a Chinaman of all work and sending to Frisco for a brass bed and a Persian rug. Some very pretty little houses begin to dot the barren landscape. A railroad stretches its metal arm down into the gold-bearing wilderness and links it with the outer world. Some tailors, some shoemakers, some saloonkeepers, some and ice cream, clergymen and drummers, pickpockets and actors and all that splendid procession from the cozy corners of civilization.

Social conditions were decidedly perplexing. Your washerwoman accepted a mining claim for an uncollectable debt. Suddenly the claim yields her a fortune, whereat, to show you that her wealth has not made her snobbish, she purchases an elaborate portable house and settles down as your next-door neighbor.

However, if you take it into your head to move away from the vicinity of the fortunate lavandiere you would find the moving problem quite simple. A small force of husky men can pull your house up by the roots and carry it up a hill or down a slope without any great exertion—that is, unless your dwelling is 'dobe, or you happen to be one of the bonanza crowd and have gone in for heavy architecture.

HOW DID THE PARROT KNOW?

Hard to Explain, But Polly Certainly Had Premonition of the Coming Earthquake.

"Beyond his habit of living to be 100 to 150 years old, the parrot is a truly remarkable bird in other ways," said Mr. E. N. Daniels of the City of Mexico.

"What makes me give utterance to this opinion is a trick that a bird which belongs to my young son executed the night of the late earthquake that shook us up so severely in Mexico. Fully five minutes before the first shock, which came a little after four o'clock in the morning, Polly set up a terrific uproar that culminated in a prolonged scream. I didn't relish the discordant racket which broke into the slumbers of the family and felt like murdering the miserable creature, especially as there was no cessation of its vocal exercise.

"While it was still coming in for my denunciations the tremor of the earth occurred, and in a second it flashed across my mind that Polly had given us warning in the only way it knew how to reach us. It may not seem reasonable that the bird should be able to sense a convulsion of nature in advance of its coming, but the facts are as I have stated, and after the affair was over I petted the parrot as much as I had scolded it a little while before. It has a meal ticket for life in the Daniels household, and money wouldn't buy it."

Easily Imagined.

Imagine, if you please, time when every family can have its own flying machine—a means of getting out for a day with as much safety as now attends the automobile or the old family horse. Wouldn't such a thing add a value to the world? Would it not enhance the pleasure of living to be able to take the wife and babies out for a spin in the sky, where the air is pure, where all the cares of the world are left behind, and where the sun and moon and stars are so close that one can reach out and touch them? Would it not add to the sum total of human happiness to take to the clouds as do the birds, and to have to consider neither the beaten highways nor the rocky barriers of the mountain ranges? Certainly it would. And just as certainly such a time is rapidly dawning on the human race.—Springfield (O.) News.

A Millionaire Before He Was 21.

The arch prospector of all times was Cecil Rhodes. For him it was not merely going out and putting down holes in likely places. At 17 he had been touched with tuberculosis and ordered south. Arriving at his brother Herbert's cotton plantation in Africa in the midst of the second diamond excitement, he, with Herbert, was drawn into the "new rush." They took a claim at Colesburg—at 30 shillings a month rental. In a few weeks each leased a full claim, all the law allowed. Cecil Rhodes set himself to get the law to allow one man to own two claims, then ten, and then as many as he could lay hold of. So well did Rhodes keep pace with changing regulations that he returned to England at 19 a millionaire.—Franklin Clarkin, in Everybody's.

The Better Half.

"I've often wondered," said Jones, "why woman is called the better half."

"I'll tell you," said Smith; "but it's a hard matter to clearly define. You naturally, being a workman, think money better than anything else?"

Jones assented. "You likewise know that money talks?"

"So I've heard," Jones replied; "although, to tell the truth, I usually hear only the echo of it."

"Well, we grant that money is better than all else; we grant, also, that money talks. Well, woman is half of a man's life. And—"

"Yes, indeed," finished Jones, interrupting him, "and she certainly does talk."

USES WINGS TO CATCH FISH

Sly Old Bird Is the Cassowary, According to Observations Made by Naturalist.

Habits of the cormorant and of our native fish hawk are generally known. Their methods of taking fish are very much like those of birds of prey. But the cassowary fishes according to a method of its own. A well-known naturalist witnessed its operations on a river in the island of New Britain.

He saw a cassowary come down to the water's edge and stand for some minutes apparently watching the water carefully. It then stepped into the river where it was about three feet deep, and partially squatting down, spread its wings out, submerging them, the feathers being spread and ruffled.

The bird remained motionless, and kept its eyes closed as if in sleep. It remained in this position for a quarter of an hour, when suddenly closing its wings and straightening its feathers it stepped out on the bank. Here it shook itself several times, whereupon a quantity of small fishes fell out of its wings and from among its feathers. These the bird immediately picked up and swallowed.

The fishes had evidently taken the feathers for a kind of weed and grown to the water along the banks of the river in this island and which resembles the feathers of the cassowary.

wary. The smaller fishes hide in these weeds to avoid the larger ones that prey on them.

ONLY AS OLD AS SHE LOOKS

Woman of To-Day Retains Youthfulness Longer Than Her Grandmother Did.

Women in Switzerland grow old more gracefully than any of the other women in Europe, according to a letter to the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette. That does not mean that women who work hard in youth and sap their lives out before they are 30 are pretty. Not even American women of that type are beautiful. Perhaps it means that, owing to social and economic conditions, women do not have to wear themselves out as their mothers did, and hence they are beautiful in their forties and fifties. It may be pertinent to digress here and present this query: Are not women the world over, as a rule, adding a decade to their years of youth? It does seem that there are more handsome women between 35 and 55 than there were 25 years ago. Or perhaps a boy in his 'teens isn't so charitable to the minor failings of a woman in her forties as a man is in his forties. But discounting the pride of youth, it does seem that to-day, all over the world, the woman whose family income is between $10 and $1,000 a week—a wide range, surely—this woman retains her youthful freshness and charm longer than her grandmother retained hers. Labor-saving machinery seems to have done that much for the woman in general everywhere in civilization.

The Man with Mechanical Ability.

The man with a natural aptitude for mechanics received so many invitations to take automobile trips with friends who acted as their own chauffeur that he came to be envied by his less fortunate acquaintances. One day the popular guest condescended to enlighten them as to his true status.

"You fellows needn't get green-eyed," he said. "I haven't a snap, after all. What they want me to go along for is to blow up the tires and make repairs in case of an accident. I wouldn't be such a hot favorite if I wasn't so proficient in that line. That knowledge is somewhat galling, but as I enjoy the trips I swallow my pride and accept the invitations."

Virtues of the Hazel Twig.

Hazel twigs long have been used as instruments with which to discover water under ground. The twig has at various times been credited with many marvelous powers. Not only could it discover water, but concealed lodes of metal, especially silver, were betrayed by the hazel, which, according to tradition, was guided by the pixies who guarded the treasures of the earth. In Rome the divining rod of the hazel was used to find the buried treasure of the Romans, while in some of the most ancient times the hazel twig was used to find the buried treasure of the Romans.

WALSH SENTENCE UPHOLD BY COURT

FORMER CHICAGO BANKER MUST SERVE FIVE YEARS IN PENITENTIARY.

DEFENDANT TO FIGHT FURTHER

Federal Appeal Judges Affirm Decision of Lower Court—Last Hope Rests in Possible Reversal by U. S. Supreme Court.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—John R. Walsh must serve a sentence of five years in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., for misapplying the funds of his bank, according to a decision handed down by the United States circuit court of appeals.

The decision confirms the sentence of Judge A. B. Anderson imposed after Walsh had been found guilty by a jury in his court.

The only recourse left now for Walsh is an appeal to the United States supreme court. It is certain that the appeal will be taken. Whether the highest tribunal in the country will pass upon the finding of the court is a matter for it to decide upon. It is possible that the supreme court will not review the decision. The decision marks the possible end of the fight that was begun against Walsh when in 1905 the national bank examiner closed the doors of the Chicago National bank and the Equitable Trust and Home Savings National banks, declaring that Walsh had loaned too much of the funds of the bank to his own companies.

Hears News Over Wire. The decision was rendered by Judges Peter S. Grosscup, Francis Baker and William H. Seamen.

Walsh was not present in the court room when the decision was rendered and heard the news over the telephone.

Attorney John S. Miller, chief counsel for the convicted banker, immediately after the court had handed down its decision, said:

"We will undoubtedly take some steps, but what these steps will be after the court has affirmed the decision of the lower courts I cannot say at this time.

"We have thirty days in which to apply for a rehearing in the court—the court of appeals—or to appeal to the supreme court of the United States on a writ of certiorari."

Appeal Will Be Taken.

"Will you apply to the supreme court?" Mr. Miller was asked.

"I cannot say at this time. The whole matter must be gone over thoroughly and I want to read the text of the opinion before I decide what I will do."

The decision of the court was rendered before a court room into which more than 500 people had crowded to hear the fateful news—friends of Walsh, attorneys, attaches of the district attorney's office and others.

It was half an hour and more after the scheduled hour—10 o'clock—before the three judges after a conference with Judge C. C. Kohlsaat, who had been sent for, mounted the bench and handed down the decree.

The decision handed down by the United States circuit court of appeals marks another step in Walsh's long fight against his foes, which includes many powerful financiers.

540 Years Time Possible. An aggregate penalty of 540 years in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth was possible under the verdict of the jury.

Walsh has waged a bitter fight since January 18, 1908, to avoid the prison gates and his opponents—the government lawyers, headed by U. S. District Attorney Sims, have been just as insistent in demanding that Walsh occupy one of the cells in "bankers' row" at Leavenworth.

Although the court room scene when Walsh was first found guilty was one of the most dramatic in Chicago's history, the aged banker was not crushed by the blow, but the iron nerve which he has always shown in finance, caused a grief to be short lived.

RECALLS MINISTER CHASE

HE IS TO RETURN TO WASHINGTON FOR CONFERENCE.

America's Representative to China Is Stopped From Sailing on Eve of Departure.

San Francisco, Oct. 5.—Charles R. Crane, newly appointed minister from the United States to Peking, was recalled to Washington by a telegram from Secretary Knox.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane were to have sailed on the transport Thomas today for the Orient.

Mr. Crane stated that the telegram merely requested his return to the capital, as there were certain phases of the eastern situation with which the secretary of state did not think he was fully acquainted.

"I will return to Washington day after tomorrow," said Mr. Crane when he was asked as to the recall while seated at a banquet given in his honor by the Chinese chamber of commerce. "I am waiting over one day in order to attend the banquet at which President Taft will be present. I expect to sail for the Orient on the steamer Korea, which sailed October 20."

Mr. Crane declared he did not know what matters Secretary Knox desired to discuss with him. "I did not see Mr. Knox before I left Washington," he said. "He was not in the city. I suppose something has arisen or been called to his attention which he thinks I should know before I go to my post. I do not know what it may be."

RUSH FOR RESERVED SEATS

All Tickets Sold and $100,000 Worth of Orders For Seats Were Returned.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 5.—The National baseball commission, having charge of the sale of seats for the world's series games here between Pittsburg and Detroit, announced that the public sale of reserved seats advertised for Wednesday had been called off on account of the fact that no tickets were left for either of the games of Friday or Saturday.

The mail order sale of reserved seats has been unprecedented, the 18,514 tickets for each game at Forbes field, having been all sold 48 hours after mail orders were received and the announcement being made by an official of the Pittsburg base ball club that $100,000 worth of orders for seats for the first two games have been returned with a notice that no reserved seats were left. The local club refused to accept their mail at the post office after Saturday morning, and all letters arriving after that time were returned to the senders.

Poplar Bluffs, Mo., Oct. 6.—Speeding at the rate of a mile a minute, fast mail train No. 7, on the Iron Mountain struck a horse five miles north of here today and was wrecked, killing the fireman and injuring 12 persons.

The animal's body was hurled against a switch stand with such force that the stand was demolished, the switch opened and the train derailed.

The engine leaped into the air on striking the switch-point and fell on its side at right angles to the track. One baggage car was turned over, but the mail cars and sleepers remained upright. Almost all the injuries were caused by the terrific jar of the sudden stop.

W. H. Brown, fireman, St. Louis, was killed.

200 WATER CRAFT IN LINE

Pageant Is Viewed by 400 Visiting Mayors, Who Were Guests for the Day.

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—The Centennial festivities were transferred to the Mississippi river Tuesday when the river pageant formed at the Merchants' Bridge and set sail down the channel, a long panorama of gay color. Every rowing club in the city had entries and more than 200 power boats were in line when the pageant started shortly before 10 a. m.

Officers of the torpedo boat flotilla were judges of the pageant and the torpedo boats, although not heading the pageant as was planned, were anchored in midstream in column formation and were dressed in honor of the event.

Commodore G. M. Phillips on the flagship Harriet had general supervision of the pageant. The Harriet led the long column of small craft and there were several launches acting as message bearers for the commander. These aids patrolled the channel alongside the advancing column of boats and the units of the pageant moved in accordance with instructions from the commodore's aids in the launches.
